Redistricting Forms New Political Group

Little Rock April 15 (AP) - Some political combines were upset when he Arkansas Supreme Court redistricted the state's senatorial dislricing but new ones apparently are in the making.

One indication of that is a deal in Northeast Arkansus for each of the three counties in the new 24th senatorial district to nominate one enator-rather than the district as whole to nominate three sens-

In its redistricting, the Supreme Court formed the 24th district of Mississippi, Craighead and Poinsett Counties and allotted it three enatorahins.

This is the way the arrangement would work: Names of candidates for sonaoffal position No. 1 from the district would be accepted only from Masissippi county residents; for position No. 2 from Craighead County and for position No. 3 from

Poinsett County, tee is each of the three counties either has agreed to that procedure or had indicated it will do so, So far the fillings at the Secretary of State's office here have followed that pattern. Sen. J. Lee Bearden of Blytheville (Mississippi County) has filed for position No. 1; Doug Bradley of Jonesboro (Craighead) has filed for position No. 2, and John S. Mesby of Lepanto (Poinsett) has tilea for position No. 3. So far they're the only ones to file. The arrangement is a new varia-tion od the "gentlemen's agree-ment," long popular in many of the de senatorial districts.

Until the Supreme Court ordered the redistricting, Pulaski County, as a district within itself, was the only area having more than one

But in a number of the multicounty districts, the practice was to rotate the senatorship from county to county each term. Itwould be County A's time to select s senator one term. County B's at the following term four years later and so on.

Only candidates from County A. County B, or County C would run shou it was that county's turn. Lawyers agree that the arrangements—either the old type or the new variation-bave no enforceable legal basis but say that a prospective rebel might have hard going against the influence of political leaders in his own county who were parties to the deal.

UA to Hold Classes in Little Rock

Little Rock, April 14 (R)— The University of Arkansas Board of Trustees is considering a proposal to hold all classes of the School of Pharmacy in Little Rock, Some of the classes now are held at Fayetterille. In a meeting here Saturday, the Board also voted to add a seventh-floor to the new Medical Center. building under construction here.

It is estimated that most autounder 45 miles an hour.

DID YOU KNOW THAT:

Flashing through the skies at a speed of over 1000 miles an hour, the Douglas D-558-2 "Skyrocket" flies in the Navy's air research fleet. It takes off under its own jet power, climbs to record altitudes, and gets there faster than sound. The "Skyrocket" is a patent newcomer to a field where speed is vital.

You don't need this much speed with your car. Did you know that — under the law — you are required to have your car under control at all times?
